Frequently food manufacturers will distribute brochures advertising their products to organizations participating in the Child and Adult Care Food Program (CACFP). The manufacturer may claim that their products are approved for use in the CACFP and offer sample menus that include these products. As a reminder, in order for a manufactured food product to be creditable in any of the child nutrition programs, it must have a Child Nutrition (CN) label. If the product does not have a CN label, you must have a product formulary / analysis from the manufacturer (refer to Section 4113 of your CACFP-CCC Handbook).
